YOUNG ASHFORD IS EXPELLED

Honolulu Cadet at Naval Academy "Canned" Through Spite of an Officer.

Spitework, says D. L. Conkling, was the cause of the dismissal from the Naval Academy at Annapolis of Stanley Ashford of Honolulu, son of C. W. Ashford. Conkling looked into the matter on his own initiative while at the academy and found out a few facts about it.

Stanley Ashford was, in the parlance of the academy, "canned" for smoking, but the man who finally got him was one who threatened to get him when the Honolulu boy first came there.

This man is a lieutenant of the regular navy. For some unaccountable reason this officer took a sudden and perverse dislike to young Ashford and repeatedly threatened to land him some time. While the boy was expelled from the academy for the breaking of one of its rules, for he was smoking, the action was directly the work of the officer in question.

When the new administration took hold in the academy, says Conkling, out of the 700 boys there, 390 were put on the black list. The officer who was responsible for the expulsion of Ashford was given by the other students at the academy the first "silence" given to any officer in five years.

In the language of the academy, a "silence" is the one manner in which the students are able to show their disapproval of an official act of any officer. When that officer is in charge of the dining-room, the boys file into the room silently and without a sound sit down to table, without talking to themselves or make the slightest sound with their plates. The officer who receives a silence usually asks to be relieved from duty at the academy.

The boys of the higher forms personally assured Conkling that Ashford's expulsion from the academy was the result of spitework. He stood high in his class and was bright in his studies although the Hearst newspaper, including the San Francisco Examiner came out in their usual manner to say that the expulsion of him and others had been for inaptitude.

The rabbit pest of Australia has at last become a source of industry. During the last five years 41,423,000 dozen rabbits were exported from Victoria, most of them to England, also 98,242,000 rabbit skins. Australia last year sent $243,000 worth of rabbit skins to the United States.

Armorite
The Paint
For This Climate

Armorite Paint is prepared specially to resist the chemical action of salt air.

No boatman would think of using ordinary paint on the bottom of his boat, knowing how quickly it would peel off in salt water.

Yet, when you paint a house in this climate the paint is exposed to exactly the same condition, only in a less degree. Instead of salt water the paint is exposed to salt air.

It is to meet this condition that ARMORITE PAINT has been evolved. First of all, it is a perfect paint; and, second, it contains ingredients to resist the decomposing effects of the salt atmosphere.

ARMORITE comes in the greatest variety of colors. It has great covering capacity, and we guarantee every gallon.
